Testimony presented by Jeanette Zentgraf at the Feb 2, 2011 hearing concerning HB 161:

As a member of Concerned Women for America, a retired teacher and someone who is troubled by the increasd violence in Montana, I ask you to repeal Montana's Medical Marijuana Law. Before the referendum there was so much propaganda pertaining to the dire need to alleviate people's pain, that the obvious flaw in our human character was not considered.

A flaw which our founding fathers understood, because it was well described in their Bibles. The flaw was and is greed for wealth and, or power, which thank God resulted in a 3 equal branch federal government and very significant state rights.

Unless the Medical Marijuana Law is repealed, we in MT will continue to be the victims of medical marijuana auto accidents and we will continue to witness the violence surrounding the sale of medical marijuana. We need the help that HB 161 will provide. Please support it.

Jeanette Zentgraf P.O. Box 1116 Lolo, MT 59847 273-3685 Missoulian, Wednesday, February 2, 2011 - B7

GE B1

d in the gap in similar

"I think it will be ficult for surveyors to termine what is right of ly and what isn't right of iv with this ruling, impbell said. "And I ink it will require an torney to be involved to gure it out."

City chief lministrative officer ruce Bender said city fficials will have a iscussion with the mayor o determine whether to ppeal the case.

"We haven't made a lecision on that. Certainly, ve will give it really strong onsideration because not only is the cost to the city n this ruling significant, out also, it sets a very large precedent for other situations like this," Bender said.

Third Street, for instance, doesn't line up perfectly in records either, he said. Bender also said the money would have to come out of the budget somehow, an unplanned cost that typically would come out of street improvements.

In the lawsuit, plaintiffs asked not only for lawyer fees but for "sanctions" to deter the city from "future transgressions." The court declined sanctions because the city "did not act in bad faith" and relied on expert opinion, but the court awarded attorney

Tom Orr, lawyer for the plaintiffs, said the fees over the course of six years are approaching $115,000, "a lot of money and a big hit for the city." That amount doesn't include compensation to property owners, more than originally estimated because the court included properties on both sides of the street, he said.

"From our standpoint, it was disturbing that the city would take this land without paying for it," Orr said. "It's an expensive lesson."

Reporter Keila Szpaller can be reached at @KeilaSzpaller, 523-5262, keila.szpaller@missoulian. com or on MissoulaRedTape.com.

than to describe it as "a favorite local establishment."

Missoula's Montana Caregivers Network (now also known as Cannabis Care) became nationally known for its traveling "cannabis caravans" and online clinics that signed up hundreds of patients within a few hours.

The state Board of Medical Examiners ruled in November that doctors must make full patient examinations before signing up patients for green cards. Board executive director Jean Branscum said that MCN founder Jason Christ assured the board that his business now uses face-toface visits for initial recommendations and teleconferences for followup. A teleconference was scheduled for Feb. 3.

exchange to work for the good of Montana, it can't insurance industry that has Ernesto Casillas, who owns a small Mexican restaurant made so much money (on health insurance)," said

ın in Helena. "They will say be run by the same

Christ said Tuesday that he couldn't comment on the sentence without knowing more about it.

But Tom Daubert, who heads the Patient and Families United Group that successfully backed the voters initiative that legalized medical marijuana in Montana in 2004, said that the traveling clinics and online recommendations are "a gross disservice to all those patients and to the law itself."

The 2011 Legislature is considering several bills to rein in the use of medical marijuana. The number of registered patients in the state grew threefold in 2010, and Daubert - who works as a lobbyist in Helena blames the traveling and online clinics.

"It's in large measure why tomorrow

the committee also

Some Republicans on comment money.

(Wednesday) I'm going to be facing a hearing to repeal the law completely," he said, "and why yesterday I was in a hearing on a bill to target chronic pain patients."

Reporter Gwen Florio can be reached at 523-5268, gwen.florio@ missoulian.com, or CopsAndCourts.com.

HEATING

Gallagher, Commi challengir react to tl airect its зсредије The P попот parties), pi sənssı It he onl thing; I' and says M. biss what th MI,

Contin

BA

ante teoti my 101 Ά A

JUE

CO :05

CL

exchange, wondering how it would be financed. Hunter said federal law requires that the exchanges pay for themselves, rather than costing the